Intelligence Systems for Local Agencies A Two-Way Street

This Executive Summit Series will develop a toolbox for law enforcement agencies to recognize anticipated trends toward terrorism and potential funding sources and scams to finance terrorism in your community. It is the intent that law enforcement agencies will use the tools provided during these seminars to operate proper intelligence collecting and training duties within their respective organizations.

Law enforcement leaders may say . . .

- What is in it for our agency? Why should we track this information?
- We don't need more expense, people or staff!
- We don't have terrorists in our community; we are too small.

What you can expect to learn . . .

- How a local medium-sized agency handles intelligence
- The benefits of analysis at the local level
- Open-source intelligence
- Identifying and using key resources
- Analyzing information into intelligence
- Using existing resources in local intelligence networking
- What your patrol officers need to know and look for
- How to properly identify local terrorism threats in your community
- Using intelligence led policing
- The role of fusion centers
- Developing local intelligence liaison officers.
